Special Report on The Geopolitics of Energy

Economic diversification to reduce dependence on oil rents has been a long-standing policy goal of many oil exporting countries. Countries with coveted goods, like rare-earth minerals, will gain more influence—China, in particular. And that meant, as you just suggested, what happened in the Middle East was so crucial to our future.

Energy and Geopolitics

One is because US energy competes with Russian energy in Europe, in terms of market. Working Paper 280, Brighton: Institute of Development Studies.

Special Report on The Geopolitics of Energy

I was in a meeting with Prime Minister Modi when he came to the US to talk about energy, when he spoke and so forth. The effective development of its renewables has enabled Iceland to bolster its energy security, widen its economic base and attract new industries to the country, such as aluminium smelting, data storage and greenhouse agriculture.
