In reality, trade did not develop very well, continuously obstructed by Spanish officials and short skirmishes between Britain and Spain. In 1719 another part of government debt was converted into South Sea shares the 1710 Lottery.

The South Sea Bubble: A Short Sketch of Events

To finance the debt acquisition, the company was permitted to expand its share capital. The Postmaster General took poison and his son, who was the Secretary of State, avoided disaster by fortuitously contracting smallpox and died! The company had accumulated a fund of credit 70 mln cash, available for commercial expansion, and apparently with substantial support of Parliament and the King.
