Catholics' Church Attendance Resumes Downward Slide

All were social scientists with extensive experience in qualitative, ethnographic research. We were all doing a lot more co-pastoral work Relations had improved to such an extent that we felt the time had come to do something constructive, acknowledging that relations had improved - in fact relations were very good Methodist minister. Survey Methods These results are based on aggregates of nationally representative standalone Gallup surveys for the following years: 1955, 1965-1966, 1975, 1983-1986, 1995-1996, 2005-2008 and 2014-2017.

CAIN: Background Information on Northern Ireland Society

Established the Education Authority, which replaced the five Education and Library Boards, inheriting the responsibility for delivering educational services and employer responsibilities for school staff. As Northern Ireland reflects a somewhat unique cultural, historical and political landscape, studies from the rest of the UK cannot be relied upon to fully understand the effects of socio-demographics and school factors on attainment trends in Northern Ireland.

Measuring attitudes towards Christianity among pupils in Protestant secondary schools in Northern Ireland

Catholics occurred between the 1950s and 1970s, when the percentage saying they had attended church in the past seven days fell by more than 20 percentage points. A small number of cases were reported by interviewees from mixed marriage families in which schools appeared to have been actively antagonistic or unhelpful to parents wishing to discuss the potential, or actual, problems their children might, or did, encounter.

The Religious Conflict at the Heart of Our Cultur...

In 2000, it established Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta CnaG to promote, facilitate and encourage Irish-medium Education.

‘Good Relations’ in Northern Ireland

Church Attendance expressed as percentages. This analysis is based on multiple Gallup surveys conducted near the middle of each decade from the 1950s through the present.
