Later in the same chapter he tells us that: Ancient Egypt was doubly fortunate, and doubtless owed to this its fabled wealth, in that it possessed two activities, namely, pyramid-building as well as the search for the precious metals, the fruits of which, since they could not serve the needs of man by being consumed, did not stale with abundance. Poker players must bluff occasionally—and unpredictably—in order to avoid exploitation by a savvy player. Though von Neumann knew of the earlier work of the French mathematician, he gave the subject mathematical substance by proving the.
