A Beautiful World by Grandma Moses

In fact, formal art training can be restrictive to the learning of some artists, who may be better suited to the self-taught path. ... Etienne gave her painting Fourth of July 1951 to the as a gift in 1952. The Hallmark greeting card company, for instance, profited greatly from an arrangement with the artist beginning in 1947 to create a set of holiday cards featuring reproductions of original Moses paintings.

Grandma Moses Biography, Life & Quotes

A New York shoe store observed her passing with a window display of three of her paintings and no shoes ; giant-sized crowds stood outside on Fifth Avenue in respectful silence. This became the family's preferred way to keep busy and pass the time when not at work. As her career advanced, she created complicated, panoramic compositions of rural life.
