Title IV

The state and counties would benefit from closely monitoring trends in incidence of child maltreatment reports, founded cases, the size of the substitute-care population, and child protective worker caseloads, so that they can respond appropriately to problems of inadequate child protective services before these reach crisis proportions. Those with the highest rate are the most likely to receive the guaranteed intake, which is now the only way of sustaining their revenue McEwen, 2006.

Reporting Child Abuse & Neglect It's Your Duty Your responsibilities under the Child and Family Services Act

New standards for foster care children were developed, requiring that these children be placed in the least-restrictive available setting, that plans for permanent placement be developed, and that appropriate efforts be made to reunite children with their parents or other relatives Pecora et al. The little girls are, in my opinion, permanently traumatized and the young mother of the girls was so traumatized with shock when the girls were first removed from her that she has never completely recovered.

Child Protection Case Management Operations Manual

While it is unlikely that welfare reform will have considerable influence on these broader trends, its success will undoubtedly depend upon them. Such decline may also lead caseworkers to favor removal of children from their homes as a quick way to ensure the safety of a child when risk is uncertain. Client satisfaction can also be thought of as a process measure.

Child Protection and Welfare Reform

For example, Illinois initiated performance based contracting for child welfare services in 1997, and was successful in moving thousands of children to permanency, but problems still remained with regard to placement instability and the complexity of needs for harder-to serve youth. During focus groups conducted in 2005 to assess Arizonas readiness for privatization of case management, many of the providers and external stakeholders identified data technology as an area that might be problematic. Public agencies have posted performance data on the states website, allowing a comparison between private agencies and between the public and private agencies on key performance indicators or outcome measures.

31.11 Title IV

It is not necessary for you to be certain a child is or may be in need of protection to make a report to a society.
