. Among his many talented disciples, the most influential was his stepson Sadr al-Dīn Qūnawī 1210—74, who began the process of systematizing his teachings and elucidating his perspective in conversation with contemporary philosophy, even initiating a correspondence with Naṣīr al-Dīn al-Tūsī, the important reviver of Avicenna Qūnawī, al-Murāsālāt. As other reviewers have noted this book's translation is excellent and makes many other translations from the French including, sadly, some of the works of René Guénon look quite miserable in comparison.
