More questions were added, covering subjects such as buildings and houses, agricultural and industrial production, and even—because of the frequent threats to peace in those days—weapons. In other words, the decision was made to continue the tradition established by Jean Talon. Denison fonds F 1023: Duncan Fraser Macdonald fonds F 1027: A.

Rural Electrification in Alberta

Housing data were collected from every tenth household in order to provide information about post-war housing problems and solutions for them. Rather than only transplant or import social innovation from elsewhere, he suggests we also pay close attention to what type of change grows best where we are.
