In order to prove it is not a learned behavior from society we need to study CHILDREN, not adults. We have to stop blaming and shaming each other for these mistakes.

What are the effects of prejudice and discrimination?

Awareness of disabilities tends to come later; however, some toddlers begin noticing more obvious disabilities, such as a person using a wheelchair. As a result, a prejudiced person thinks in terms of oversimplified images of groups. Children learn biases from important adults in their lives, from the media, from books and from peers.
