Like popular writings on Vietnam, they are in general colonialist, orientaling and exoticist in nature. The writer argues against national ideology, claiming that death is no easy choice. Intriguingly, the comparison between the Vietnamese and the Koreans is repeatedly alluded to both visually and textually in the novels, while the latent comparison between ROK soldiers in Vietnam and American GIs in South Korea is left 66pang Hy.

(JO 200)

Examples of American reactions to the Vietnam War, Dutch denials of the horrors wrought by colonial domination in Indonesia or Japanese failures to come to terms with the atrocities committed during World War II and in Korea come to mind.

It is evident that from the early 20th century, Korean women who wished to combat gender ideology that excluded them from direct participation in public affairs sought to build social capital in the family or in religion or in both. Nor should we belittle the actual negative consequences of the arrogance of power, such as that exercised by imperial powers over their subjects. As if such activities were not enough, Kim Hwallan was a founding member and first president of the K.
