Iowa's old order Amish (2009 edition)

Iowa Department of Education records in 2008 listed Old Order Amish schools in twelve communities: Edgewood, Davis City, Kalona, Bloomfield, Northwood, Hazelton, Drakesville, Redding, Milton, McIntire, Corydon, and Derby. His firmness is of paramount importance, for in the final analysis he is the main purveyor and perpetuator of the Amish faith.

In Iowa and elsewhere, many Old Order families have responded by expanding their family operations to include farm-related or even nonfarming pursuits. The life of the deceased is not eulogized, nor are the individual's shortcomings emphasized. In 2008, Iowa Department of Education records list thirty-two Old Order Amish schools, averaging twenty-four students each.

To function effectively, the bishop must be a man of compassion and commitment. In the years that followed we returned to Kalona many times as well as traveling on numerous occasions to the settlements in Buchanan County and Milton; later we also visited the Beachy Amish in Leon. Assisting the bishop in all his duties are two or more ministers and sometimes one or two deacons, also selected by the church district membership.
