Secular Institutes

It inevitably includes everything that pertains to the mysterium Crucis. On the other hand, they must be trained in the difficult art of interior harmony, of the interaction between love of God and love of one's brothers and sisters; they must likewise learn that prayer is the soul of the apostolate, but also that the apostolate animates and inspires prayer.

THE CONGREGATION FOR INSTITUTES OF CONSECRATED LIFE

Commonly, Irish monasteries were established by grants of land to an abbot or abbess, who came from a local noble family. His methods of evangelization, his daring, and even his ministry often crossed the framework established at that time.

They can in fact give rise to the spread of a fruitful spirituality beyond the confines of the Institute, which will then be in a position to ensure the continuity in the Church of the services typical of the Institute. They should give a special place in their ministry to the poorest and most abandoned of the sick, such as the elderly, and those who are handicapped, marginalized, or terminally ill, and to the victims of drug abuse and the new contagious diseases.

Kitzmiller v. Dover: The Role of The Discovery Institute

In presentday circumstances, special importance must be given to the interior freedom of consecrated persons, their affective maturity, their ability to communicate with others, especially in their own community, their serenity of spirit, their compassion for those who are suffering, their love for the truth, and a correspondence between their actions and their words. The Son, who is the way which leads to the Father cf. In the first half of the fourth century, the desert areas of northern Egypt were populated by colonies of hermits, whose sayings dicta were gathered together in the Apophthegmata Patrum.

Forms of Consecrated Life

For formation to be complete, it must include every aspect of Christian life. Quite often, however, it may happen that the Superior is unable to locate the absent religious.

Religious institute

The word of God is the first source of all Christian spirituality.
