FRAY URDANETA: Philippines First Prelate & Discoverer of the Manila

This same day, all the officers of the ship agreed with the Captain not to sail further north, because we had lost many men, and we had to make our way to the islands of Molucca. His Castilian is a romance with strong Gasconian and Galician-Portuguese undertones, particularly when it concerns nautical terminology.

And so, on 21 November 1564, the expedition of Miguel López de Legazpi, with Urdaneta as the navigator, sails from the port of Navidad, officially bound for New Guinea, but with all its navigational plans referring to the Philippines. The lack of a collection of registry records prevents us from learning more concerning the descendants of Urdaneta. This was based on Dr.

Mari Urdaneta

He was later invited to command a new Spanish expedition to the Islands of the East, but refused because he believed that the Philippines and the Moluccas were in Portuguese territory, according to treaties Spain had entered with the Papacy and Portugal.
