Thermoplastics for the Automotive Industry

The quality of this oil corresponds to that of petroleum products, and materials made from it are equally high-grade as new ones.

DSM in Engineering Materials

DSM in Engineering Materials

The pressure loss due to interfacial friction between tube and granular medium is reduced, and the pressure generation inside the medium is optimized. Also, such an addition made to the technology capital has improved the manufacturing processes of automobile components.

Plastic parts and Moulds Manufacturer for Automotive and Engineering Industry

However, more than 70% of the plastic used in automobiles comes from four polymers: polypropylene, polyurethane, polyamides and PVC. It's being used increasingly in the car world for its lightweight but tough nature.

DSM in Engineering Materials

Function : to support load without bending Objective : to minimize mass m of the panel Constraints: geometrical constraints b, L , functional constraints F Free variables: d thickness and material choice.

Plastics for Automotive

In the subsequent forming operation, the final geometry is set, with the benefit of an increased strength through work hardening. Aluminium castings have been applied to various automobile parts for a long period.
