Nong fu zhu he lü pi long (2009 edition)

A year after his death, a deputy in the Board of Works made a submission to the emperor appealing Li's innocence, arguing that since Li was already at the apex of honour, wealth and power, the accusation that he wanted to help someone else usurp the throne was clearly ridiculous. He is often reckless when making important decisions, and resorts to every means in order to get to the throne, including murdering his father. In the case alone, tens of thousands of officials and their families were executed over sedition, treason, corruption and other charges.
