The Emperor also distributed pieces of gold- stuff and rich girdles to several of the musicians, and some of the courtiers ; after which the drinking began. Alphonso's imagination, full of the agreeable ideas of fable, wished, before he quitted that charming place, to carve four verses he had just written upon the bark of a tree : he, for this purpose, went to one, much like the pine in appearance, drew his knife, began to cut, and saw the blood follow the wound ; tempted to suppose he had wounded a nymph metamorphosed to a tree, he recoiled with terror, and the murderous weapon dropt from his hand. This pillar descended with impetuosity from the mountain, breaking and overturning the trees that stood in its way, attracting and engulfing leaves and branches, and tearing up some by the roots ; at the bottom of the mountain it fell ! It was in that very place 78 THE TALES OF THE CASTLE.
