Welfare Reform and Pensions Act 1999

Today's trade union delegation to see Angela Merkel in Berlin is led by John Sweeney, President of the American trade union centre, the AFL-CIO, and Michael Sommer, President of the German Trade Union Confederation. Maybe its the FRS-17 basis that does it? However, it is impossible for him to keep his costs below the 1 per cent cap when dealing with, for example, the self-employed trader or the employee who cannot be seen in the workplace.

Chapter 8: pensions

In the private sector, some unions have successfully negotiated settlements with employers. The , to their credit, have given increases across a range of benefits for retired people.

General Council Report 2002: Chapter 5

However, the TUC also expressed concern that scheme members would be required to meet the additional costs of the benefit improvement. Evidence suggests the target group are not well informed about this particular market.

Funded Pensions: 2 Jul 2002: House of Commons debates

CVS had previously adopted a standard for majority voting in the election of directors so Headrick came within 6 percent of being removed from the board. Gentleman then thinks that I have still not addressed his question, he can come back to me. Our future system must continue to protect the poorest.

Employers

I have told the Government that. Labour Members could not have done that without the support of my hon. At the same time, the TUC published Social Security and the Changing Labour Market, a report commissioned from Professor David Piachaud and Jo Webb, of the London School of Economics as a response to claims that global competition and new technology have rendered the notion of social protection outdated.
