And it is all the better for it. Here, challenge yourself down outstanding singletrack and sweat your way up bracken-covered slopes. Up in the Peak District, the only complaint you could have is that it offers too many hiking routes to choose from.

Hereford

Your hikes in Leicestershire will take you into the National Forest, which covers much of the west of the county.

Hereford

Here you can explore the rocky outcrops that provide opportunities to spot the peregrine falcons that thrive in the skies above. When hiking in the west, you are more likely to feel the effects of fronts coming in off the Atlantic, bringing wind and rain, particularly in the uplands. It will be a place to plot and plan your future travels.

In the north of the county stretch the Shropshire plains, a fertile agricultural land of atmospheric meres, mosses and nature reserves. Restoration of the west front was not completed until 1904—08. Arnside and Silverdale AONB is well-loved for its distinctive limestone pavements, grazed saltmarshes and abundant birdlife.
