Dearest Munx: The Letters of Christina Stead and William J. Blake by Christina Stead

A few months before Christina Stead died in April 1983, a photographer from Mode magazine captured something of the force field of her. In one letter she relates a dinner in Paris with a Serbian anarchist poet hailed by Picasso and an Emir, the head of a famous Arabian family, people she would not be likely to meet in Sydney.

Christina Stead by Sarina Holmlund

Her father, David Stead, was a Fabian Socialist, and eminent naturalist; later he formed and managed the New South Wales Government State Trawling Industry. Christina Anstead is known for beautiful home renovations, so it's no surprise that that she treated herself to a lavish home in Newport Beach, Calif. She first departed Australia in 1928, and worked in a Parisian bank from 1930 to 1935.
