Why some of us give ourselves permission to love people of our own sex whereas others cannot even imagine doing so is an interesting question... People fall in love with individuals, not with sex.

Compulsory heterosexuality and the social construction of sexuality and gender

Whereas Marxists have discussed sex in respect of the role of intimate relations in the reproduction of both labour and social relations, feminists addressed more directly issues of identity, relations, behaviour and central concepts of love and desire or their 'illusion' and pleasure and desire in the organisation of gendered society. Nicola Field, Over the Rainbow, 167, 172.

The Social Construction of Sexuality by Steven Seidman

Body image is closely linked to during adolescence and can cause harmful effects when a child has body dissatisfaction. It can also refer to the set of social expectations commonly associated with that gender: performative gender often performed unconsciously.
