Mining in Colorado: Past, Present, and Future

No response came until 1864 because nearly all available men and materiel were in use to fight the Civil War.

Saga of Colorado Gold Part I

When the rush began in earnest in 1859, groups of Cheyenne, Lakota, Arapaho, and Kiowa lived on the plains, while Arapaho bands lived throughout the Front Range.

Pike's Peak Gold Rush

Just a few weeks after the completion of Russell's trip another exploration was on its way to open up the Smoky Hill route. At times, during the 1860s, native violence was so great that various trails were closed to travel.

Mining in Colorado: Past, Present, and Future

Again, travel on the plains became risky and for a time, during the spring of 1865, trails were closed; this time by the United States Army.
