22 National Parks With Native American Heritage & Cultural Sites

NPS photo We may find that our future climate is challenging to parks and people alike. To further advance the goal of secure borders, health and safety, and resource protection, the NPS works cooperatively with DHS Customs and Border Protection. Cultural heritage is not just a remnant of history.

Climate Change and National Parks (U.S. National Park Service)

The region encompasses eight states and 82 park units across diverse landscapes of arid deserts, high plains, high mountain ranges and red rock canyons.

Protecting Cultural Heritage

No, with the exception of a current exemption for existing licensed tour operators that offer rock climbing and abseiling at Summerday Valley, Lookout Point Wall and The Rock Wall in the Grandpains National Park. The term Mesa Verde stands for Green Table in Spanish. The six Ancestral Puebloan village groups you can visit in this amazing park include the Cajon Group, Cutthroat Castle Group, the Holly Group, the Horseshoe and Hackberry Groups, and the Square Tower Group.

Protecting Cultural Heritage

For NPS, Congress has provided additional funding in each of the last three years to address the impacts on park resources and visitors, including funding for additional law enforcement positions and a vehicle barrier at Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument and Coronado National Memorial.

Protecting Aboriginal Cultural Heritage

Other Plains Indian tribes like the Cheyenne, Arapaho, Comanches and Kiowa also came here to exchange products. The Navajo Nation has been highly critical of the proposal. The hospitable Hidatsa people welcomed visitors to their villages for hundreds of years.

Protecting natural and cultural values

We are also working to preserve the cultural heritage of Copper Triangle communities while cleaning up historical mining impacts.
