Compositional variation in Sudbury ores and proximity of footwall copper

Formation of magmatic nickel sulfide deposits and processes affecting their copper and platinum group element contents; in Hedenquist, J. All have been cited as multi-ring basins. Many deposits, such as the pyrrhotite-lollingite-bearing Hedley District mines, are notably low in total sulphur.

The cutter suction dredge is most suitable for mining softer deposits where the material is of a relatively low specific gravity or fine particle size—for example, in sand and gravel pits, phosphate mines, and various salt deposits. Other caps are available in which the delays are introduced electrically through the use of microcircuitry. Granites are abundant within both the Qaidam-Qilian orogenic belts and basement blocks.
