Wagner: Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg

Walther's song is a curious novelty to the Masters and Beckmesser noisily marks fault after fault - though Sachs believes that they are witnessing something quite new and special. It is a pleasant summer evening and during this scene night falls.

The Mastersingers of Nürnberg

Walther hears them too, and after a momentary pause of discomposure continues. So what we are presented with is not a fait accompli: Sachs as reflective, private man—in contrast to the public Sachs of earlier scenes.

He's even locked us in! So, think back to this with gratitude: how can the art be unworthy which embraces such prizes? It was the elder-tree: Midsummer Eve! How did they get into my house? Die Meister erheben sich beistimmend. In Nürnberg der grösste Meister mich lehrt die Kunst Hans Sachs! That we alone in the broad German empire still cherish Art - by that they set little store: but how this may redound to our honour, and that with high resolve we treasure what is beautiful and good, Mein' Stell' und Amt lass' ich ihm gern. Due to its strategic importance, it was heavily bombed during the war and largely destroyed.

SCHWARZ The last: God's will! Opera e regia fra Ottocento e contemporaneità, Lucca LIM 2019, pp. LEHRBUBEN lustig aufspringend Alle Zeit! When Magdalene enters she learns from David that Walther was unsuccessful. I must add, however, that while the sound on this new recording is very full and clear, it lacks warmth.

BECKMESSER Der Sachs ist ja da! Empieza a dar una confusa lección sobre las reglas de composición y canto de los maestros cantores muchas de las melodías que describe pertenecían realmente a maestros de la época. Wouldn't you like to try the sausage too? But Walther has grown tired of words; he asks Sachs what his intentions are. Der kurze, lang' und überlang' Ton, die Schreibpapier-, Schwarzintente; der rote, blau' und grüne Ton; die Hageblüh-, Strohalm-, Fenchelweis'; der zarte, der süsse, der Rosenton; die Rosmarin-, Gelbeigleinweis', die Regenbogen-, die Nachtigallweis'; die englische Zinn-, die Zimtröhrenweis'; frisch Pomeranzen-, grün Lindenblüh'weis'; die Frösch-, die Kälber-, die Stieglitzweis', die abschied'ne Vielfrassweis', der Lerchen, der Schnecken-, der Bellerton, die Melissenblümlein-, die Meiranweis', gefühlvoll Gelblöwenhaut-, treu Pelikanweis', prunkvoll die buntglänzende Drahtweis'! Pogner and Beckmesser seem to agree that Beckmesser will win the contest - and thus Eva's hand - but Beckmesser is wondering if Eva will agree to marry him.
