Idealism Theory in International Relations

Idealism assumes that people were by nature not sinful or wicked, but that harmful behaviour was the result of structural arrangement motivating individual to act.

Idealism: Idealism in International Relations

They strongly oppose the realist view of international politics as struggle for power and national interest and advocate the use of reason, education and science for securing reforms in relations and for eliminating war and other evils from international relations. Hence the individual is both sovereign and subject. Thus, an idealist is someone who is not a realist, not a materialist, not a dogmatist, not an empiricist, and so on.

Theoris of international relation

Even if his relation with wealth and property is severed, it is not possible to do so in the case of wife, children and family. I, 2; see also II.

Idealism in international relations

According to him, the self-contradictoriness of what is appearance already implies that there is positive knowledge of reality: reality has to be One in the sense that it does not allow discord and it must be such that it can include diversity cf. He writes: If we therefore define philosophy as a whole according to that wherein it surveys and presents everything, namely the absolute act of cognition, of which even Nature is again only one side, the Idea of all ideas, then it is Idealism.
