Regional Development And Spatial Planning in an Enlarged European Union

The strategies are necessary for all major transport projects because without them, there may not be the required level of potential travel demand to justify the required investment. With the regional planning guidelines in place, the next task is to shift emphasis to the achievement of these guidelines' objectives in each region. This paper presents new evidence on the impact of such regulations on housing starts.

Dublin Transport Authority Act 2008

What we propose is the establishment of a National Land Bank Management Agency.
