老残游记外编卷一（残稿）

Laocan youji represents one interesting attempt to revive and reassert the values of the lyric ideology. Greatly angered, De Huisheng writes a letter to the magistrate whom he knows slightly.

Chinese Literature

To be sure, in Part Two, Yellow Dragon uses ideas from Darwinian biology and Western physics to explain his esoteric conception of the workings of the cosmos and to support his own prediction of future events.

Chinese Literature

Exposure novels, represented by Li Boyuan's 1867-1906 The Bureaucrat: A Revelation and Wu Yanren's 1866-1910 Strange Events for the Last Twenty Years, deliberately chose focus on reformism and expose the corruption of the government and the crimes committed by capitalist countries.

Spatial

See Kao Yu-kung's article for a comprehensive treatment of the lyric vision embodied in these two novels.

老残游记外编卷一（残稿）

She does so in great eloquence and frankness, in a manner surpassing Yugu's eloquence and openness in Part Two. Earlier I commented on the functions of the prologue and the parallels between the opening chapter and the rest of the book.

The Travels of Lao Can

A fejezetek végéről pedig nem maradhat el az olvasók buzdítására szolgáló formula, miszerint, ha az olvasó kíváncsi a történet alakulására, akkor azt majd más alkalommal hallgathatja meg, vagy megtudják, ha elolvassák a következő fejezetet. Its exploration of faint eastern Euro influences is a divergence of design.
