Radiators with vertical tubes have better efficiency than those with horizontal tubes. They represent a possibility greater than spaces of political contestation and hesitant demarcation.

Then, tubes with circular and elliptic sections are investigated for different flows, inlet temperatures and concentrations. Hundreds of islands dot the waters between the Arabian and Persian shores. The results indicate that radiators with vertical tubes have better efficiency up to 10% than radiators with horizontal tubes.

Analyzing pressure drop, Nusselt number and sensitivity for each simulation. Their historical roles were as varied as places of leisure, spirituality, planning, war, exile, and health 1 edition published in 2018 in English and held by 1 WorldCat member library worldwide Highlights: Numerical simulation of a heat exchanger containing nanofluid under external flow. These islands are the sites of identity in formation, places of experimentation and architectural invention.

Hundreds of islands dot the waters between the Arabian and Persian shores. In addition, heat exchangers with circular pipes have 25% lower pressure drop and those with elliptical tubes had 10% higher Nusselt number.

Results are presented in terms of temperature distribution, pressure drop, Nusselt number and their sensitivity analysis for different states. The finding shows that an increase in the Nano-fluid concentration improves the Nusselt number and increases the pressure drop.

In an area of physical, religious, and political division, the publication tells the story of the Gulf's islands and the possibilities they hold for a joint territorial project. An afterthought in the political maneuverings of their respective coasts, tell an alternative narrative to the one which drives conceptions of the region.
