Section 7 and Section 37 Reports

Where a child has been looked-after and has returned home, information from previous assessments and case records should also be reviewed. In particular, the court should consider — a the effect of the domestic abuse on the child and on the arrangements for where the child is living; b the effect of the domestic abuse on the child and its effect on the child's relationship with the parents; c whether the parent is motivated by a desire to promote the best interests of the child or is using the process to continue a form of domestic abuse against the other parent; d the likely behaviour during contact of the parent against whom findings are made and its effect on the child; and e the capacity of the parents to appreciate the effect of past domestic abuse and the potential for future domestic abuse. The review points should be agreed by the social worker with other practitioners and with the child and family to continue evaluating the impact of any change on the welfare of the child.

If satisfactory information is then available, the order may be made at the adjourned hearing in the agreed terms without the need for attendance by the parties.

Children who may be alleged perpetrators should also be assessed to understand the impact of contextual issues on their safety and welfare. Immediate Protection Where there is a risk to the life of a child or a likelihood of serious immediate harm, local authority social workers, the police or NSPCC should use their statutory child protection powers to act immediately to secure the safety of the child.

Chapter 1: Assessing need and providing help

The local authority must consider the representations and send a notice of response within time limits set out in paragraphs 3 to 5.
