History of the Telephone

The term to indicate Canada's status as a self-governing colony of the British Empire, the first time it was used about a country. In 1770, a French army captain, Nicolas Cugnot, built a steam-artillery tractor, the first self-propelled land vehicle; a Belgian, Jean-Joseph-Étienne Lenoir, first used a gas engine in a vehicle to drive on a highway in 1859. Bell, in the work room, held one instrument in his hands, while Watson in the cellar listened at the other.
