The mob then burned a convent, then another church, a Catholic school, a Catholic orphanage, and finally a polytechnical college also run by the Jesuits. The Crusades expanded this dramatically, by increasing demand.

Crusade in Spain by Jason Gurney

The Irish Catholics had to lend their aid to Spanish Catholics in order to defeat the Red Beast that sought to enslave them all. Their precarious status forced new diplomatic contacts with Eastern powers but also strengthened the Muslim conviction that jihād could be carried farther west.
