The Postwar Economy: 1945

Records of the Organization and Program Branch, consisting of a subject file, 1945-49; and reference files on military government regulations, 1944-49. No more than half of the respondents in any Muslim public views North Korea as a great or moderate threat. With the onset of World War II, federal, state, and local government greatly expanded in size and scope, along with the American economy, and so did expenditures on public health.

Women and Work After World War II

With the defeat of Germany and Japan, their plans were put into action. And it got a starring role in public health campaigns which were more elaborately planned and coordinated than ever before.

The Post

Views of the reconstruction effort are even more negative elsewhere. Subject file concerning interzonal and military government liaison officers' meetings, 1945-48. But in the 1940s it was still au courant, regarded as very modern and very scientific.

Wartime and post

After the war, many of the programs introduced during the war were discontinued, in an effort to reduce expenditures to pre-war levels. As recently as last summer, more than six-in-ten French and Germans 61% expressed favorable views of the U. Public Health Service public relations experts Elizabeth G.

The Rehabilitation of Post

But the medium of film inspired larger visions. High Commissioner for Germany, RG 466. Wyeth's realism, which sat comfortably within an American tradition pioneered by the likes of Winslow Homer and Thomas Eakins, reassured a postwar public alienated by abstraction and other strains of avant-garde art.

Women and Work After World War II

Three years later consumers were buying 250,000 sets a month, and by 1960 three-quarters of all families owned at least one set. Transcripts of oral history interviews of Gen.

Wartime and post

Meeting with Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud, Roosevelt and Churchill recognized the two men as the joint leaders of the Free French. Gains in led to agricultural overproduction, as farming became a big business. These houses were poorly built or someone stole by sparing building material.
