Israel even begged King of Hussein of Jordan to cease hostilities after the war with Egypt broke out in fear of not being able to maintain a second front. As Israel continued its offensive on 7 June, taking no account of the UN ceasefire resolution, the Egyptian-Jordanian command ordered a full Jordanian withdrawal for the second time, in order to avoid an annihilation of the Jordanian army. Nasser remained adamant, and on May 22, after UNEF withdrew, he announced that he would close the Straits.

This Week In History: The Arab League's three no's

So we took the Sinai out of a desire for land, and then returned it out of a desire for land? One battalion attacked from Mount Scopus, and another attacked from the valley between it and the Old City. In Egypt, according to , Nasser had admitted his responsibility for the military defeat in June 1967.

Parallel Realities

The US is not party to the Rome Statute, and anyways the statutes dealing with aggression were so politically viable in the ASP, they had to be made completely optional.
