Community drug problems

For example, 69 percent of the county officials responding to a 2005 survey by the National Association of Counties report that they had to develop additional training and special protocols for county welfare workers who work with children exposed to methamphetamine. A more detailed view includes the key activities of each component and summary results from the feasibility study mentioned above. Environmental Strategies Under a public health perspective, environmental factors, such as the availability of substances, are important determinants of youth substance use and abuse.

Community Approaches

Acting on What We Learned Health officials in Cabell County now know the number of residents who use injection drugs, their demographics, the types of substances they use, their attempts to quit using drugs and access services, and other problems they face, such as homelessness and hunger. Washington, DC: Georgetown University Center for Child Health and Mental Health Policy, CASSP Technical Assistance Center; 1989.

What is a Community Drug Problem?

Play grounds, parks and recreational areas are taken over by the drugs trade. The stage of community readiness can be assessed by asking a small number of knowledgeable members of a community about how a specific health or social issue has been understood and dealt with in the past, and what the prevailing norms surrounding that issue are in the community.

A COMMUNITY PREVENTION INTERVENTION TO REDUCE YOUTH FROM INHALING AND INGESTING HARMFUL LEGAL PRODUCTS

This accounted for 52 per cent of those identified. The nature of community responses 'Community responses' is best viewed as an umbrella term, covering a range of different types of organisation.

Community drug problems

As the field of prevention has matured, it has been recognized that any single strategy is unlikely to succeed and a reinforcing set of strategies has the greatest potential to reduce use.
