A Poetics of Arabic Autobiography: Between Dissociation and Belonging 2019055919, 2019055920, 9780367258016, 9780429289958

It is significant that the children meet at a site whose remains attests to this older source of violence that lurks beneath the surface both literally, in terms of the landscape, and historically, in terms of its effects on the history of the region. I argue that the relational paradigm employed in each autobiography I analyze and the concomitant aesthetic strategies expose a deep ambivalence and constant dialectical movement between two seemingly paradoxical or opposing desires— between the desire to separate from others and the desire to engage with others, to mingle and integrate within a particular relationship, community or milieu.
