Finnish journalist wonders why Finns do not engage in the same debate as Swedes, and just seem to accept advice from scientists and the government in a way Swedes do not. In order to determine what features are most important to be set aside, it is necessary to describe the earth science diversity of the land base and to determine the most significant elements essential to the description of that diversity. They met each week to discuss the causes and effects of problems of contemporary society in our own and other political and economic systems.
