So what's the poor seeker supposed to do? If someone understands that God brings about their suffering in order to test their faith, what does this say about God? The Gospels, according to an influential school of Protestant theologians, were to be taken as theological rather than as historical documents, and they could yield no authentic information about the life and deeds, or even the sayings and teachings of Jesus. The slow pace of the Vigil works against theologies that tend to jump quickly from Good Friday to Easter Sunday. The Spirit is also frequently mentioned in Ezekiel while being virtually absent from Jeremiah.

Salvation, in turn, like teaching, is integrally related to mission, so it makes sense that all three—mission, teaching, and salvation—are prominent themes in the LTT. He does this especially through his use of the book of Acts and the early ministry of the apostles.
