Duino Elegies Quotes by Rainer Maria Rilke

Lovingly went down into more ancient bloodstreams, into ravines where Horror lay, still gorged on his forefathers. It reflects hopes and fears, experiences of Good and Evil, and inner searchings which are very much with us today. Wo willst du sie bergen, da doch die großen fremden Gedanken bei dir aus und ein gehn und öfters bleiben bei Nacht.

Rainer Maria Rilke: Duino Elegies

Bir vazo bul buluştur, koru onu! To some extent, they were different in kind.

Duino Elegies: The Fourth Elegy Poem by Rainer Maria Rilke

The experiences which inspired them were not only more profound and subtle than those which generally fall to our lot. Or someone dies and is it.

Review: Reading Rilke, Duino Elegies

Whom to give it to? What could come of it? And we: onlookers, always, everywhere, always looking into, never out of, everything.

Rainer Maria Rilke: Duino Elegies

Though this should not confuse us, but strengthen in us the keeping of still recognisable forms. A wave lifted towards you out of the past, or, as you walked past an open window, a violin gave of itself. We follow him back to his rooms where he writes the First and Second of the Elegies and fragments of the others.
