Above the walls in breathtakingly beautiful combinations rise majestic buildings of white stone, crowned with bright yellow, gold and silver cupolas, brightly-coloured onion domes and steep, sloping roofs. The mighty walls and earth ramparts of Vladimir, the stately Golden Gate, the spacious, paved squares, the white-stone palaces and churches, the golden domes, the lavish frescoes and carving, the sumptuous cloths and church plate were all designed to inspire respect for the prince of Vladimir and faith in his ability to unite Russia, which was disintegrating in dissent and bloodshed.
