A framework for the school curriculum (1980)

Save the dates Years 9 to 12 Project December Professional Learning Program Hear from leading educators and experts, engage with the Years 9 to 12 Project team, VET specialists and Curriculum Leaders, and be empowered to plan for the future. This task cannot be undertaken from the centre alone. Narrowing the curriculum for less able students or stretching GCSE study into key stage 3 clearly runs counter to this definition of breadth.

In other words, way-points set out what students need to know about the current topic in order to understand and succeed in the next topic. The standards require schools to provide a curriculum that gives students experience in the following areas: linguistic, mathematical, scientific, technological, human and social, physical, and aesthetic and creative, so that it promotes spiritual, moral, social and cultural development. These surveys were open from December 2018 to February 2019.

Meetings will be held online and will be recorded, where possible. HM Inspectors' contribution to the debate is published as 'A View of the Curriculum' in their 'Matters for Discussion' series.

Need to know: Ofsted's new inspection framework

The papers include education theory, case studies and best practice examples from Tasmania, Australia and internationally. A big thank you to everyone who participated! Ofsted will still give schools an overall inspection grade. Ministers have eight weeks to decide whether or not to issue a call-in notice.

Publication of Arad's public consultation analysis, Our National Mission: A Transformational Curriculum, proposals for a new legislative framework

The position of religious education in the school curriculum is unique, in that religious instruction is specifically provided for in the 1944 Education Act. Rather than talking in the abstract about a particular grading system, flight path or level, inspectors will want to know exactly what the curriculum is intended to teach, at whole school and subject level.

Much better to base your work on the best evidence we have, rather than on what intuitively feels right. Consistency of approach among an authority's primary schools, laying a sound basis for transfer to the secondary stage, is important. In general pupils should have a minimum of two, and preferably three years of foreign language teaching, amounting to about 10 per cent of school time during these years.

Curriculum design under the new Ofsted regime

Public consultation open on new draft Primary School Curriculum Framework Minister for Education and Skills Joe McHugh T.
