Synopsis Astylus or Astilus, in some editions informs Lycidas that Nyctilus and Alcon recently had a song contest. Stranger, thy weary feet have strayed To the fairest spot of our happy plains, To bright Colonus' glowing mead, O'er which war-steeds champ the burning reins ; Where far within each sunny glade, The frequent nightingale Pours forth her plaintive wail, Deep in the flowering thicket's gloom embowered ; Nestling beneath the ivy's sombre leaf, Or the fruit-laden tree, That none may venture nigh, Nor ever mortal eye Rest on the plant that shades the Deity. Just rewards match the worker's task.
