MAJOR IDEAS AND THOUGHTS OF THREE OF SOCIOLOGY'S FOUNDERS
Karl Marx	Max Weber	Emile Durkheim
Wrote "The Communist Manifesto" and is known as the "Father of Communism".	His analysis of modern society centered on the concept of rationalization .	Wrote the book "The Division of Labor in Society" (1916).
Developed the concept of false consciousness and that a society must replace that with class consciousness .	Introduced the idea of how individuals experienced control, decision that is decisions themselves.	Once a society achieves organic solidarity , it has reached its development.
Described modern society in terms of Alienation .	Emphasized the viewpoint of the individual and how modern individual makes society.	Social order and divisions are necessary in a society.
Related to capitalism as the "dictatorship of the bourgeoisie".	Came up with the term Iron Cage in which the individual is trapped by institutions and bureaucracy.	Linked society to that of a living organism, each organ plays a necessary role in keeping the body alive.
Saw conflict in society as the primary means of change.	The symbolic interaction theory is based on the early ideas.	Believed that social integration was a key factor in social life.
Society's conditions are predicted upon the ideas of base and superstructure .	Why does capitalism exist? Protestantism.	Society is greater than the sum of its parts.
Under capitalism, managers were only for monetary reasons, not love.	Community more important than family.	Individualism, excessive hope.
	How can we change the world? None!	We have too much freedom.

Marx, marginalism and modern sociology : from Adam Smith to Max Weber / Simon Clarke

Developing the inner-relation of alienated labor and exchange-value, Clarke proceeds to demonstrate, that the neoclassical school of economics functions by abstracting rational and voluntary exchanges from the irrational content of capitalist society. A book that does not look new and has been read but is in excellent condition. .
