Funeral Oration for His Holiness Pope Pius VI. by Monsignore Erskine, His Auditor

The Parish of Rovereto 1834-1836. The Internet Medieval Sourcebook, and other medieval components of the project, are located at the.

Full text of life of Antonio Rosmini

Perhaps he had some presentiment of the coming sorrows with which he would himself be tried, or it may be that God was preparing him by these considerations for the future trials that awaited him. The above remarks are concerned more with Rosmini's creation, the Institute of Charity, than with the personality of the Father Founder himself.

Twenty Years Before the Mast

For all men praise the dead, and, however preeminent your virtue may be, I do not say even to approach them, and avoid living their rivals and detractors, but when a man is out of the way, the honor and goodwill which he receives is unalloyed.

Pius VI Pope 1717

Vincent Ferrer says, in expounding that passage, that the holy souls in Purgatory cry to God for justice against those who on earth refuse to help them by their prayers, and that God will most assuredly hear their cry. After the bodies have been laid in the earth, a man chosen by the state, of approved wisdom and eminent reputation, pronounces over them an appropriate panegyric; after which all retire. How delightful is this quiet! Fortunately for him, and all those who were flying from the revolutionists, General Mack, the Austrian commander, held the district between Albano and Naples, to which city the Cardinal now directed his journey.
