New Acland coalmine expansion to be reassessed after high court judgment

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED: 1. Unit II Men's Advisory Council, 506 U. To support his contention that the requests for admission were not based on grand jury materials, respondent introduced the affidavit of David Johnson Johnson, the attorney who drafted the requested admissions.

Similarly, there is no showing it would have been impossible for the principals to have complied with the notice requirements of sections 4456 and 5901 simply because the VW itself was not then in the principals' possession.

The other two men, meanwhile, had been waiting in the minibus in an open area alongside the road just outside Sizamile. Thus, because respondent reasonably relied on petitioners' failure to reply or object to the requested admissions, withdrawal of the deemed admissions would result in an unfair waste of respondent's work on the motion. Dahlstrom, husband and wife, resided in Texas at the time their petition was filed.

Nevertheless, as with the standard of care, the common-knowledge exception applies to proximate causation in professional negligence cases. David Johnson, in addition to drafting respondent's requests for admission as previously discussed, also drafted respondent's interrogatories to petitioners and respondent's request for production of documents. It is when the trial court is of the opinion that there is no evidence upon which the accused might reasonably be convicted that the difficulty arises.

On similar grounds the second accused was not convicted at all. There is direct evidence the Palas farm was in Allamakee County, Iowa; Palas owned a herd of cattle which he kept on this farm; September 20 on a double count by Palas and his wife there were 40 milk cows and heifers and 31 head in the feed lot; when they were counted again at the Palas farm on October 2 eleven from the feed lot were missing and there is direct evidence neither Palas, his wife nor anyone else in authority gave consent to the removal of these eleven cattle.
