Its main disadvantage is that people do not normally learn at the same pace. Knowledge, Skills, and Abilities Today's workplace often requires employees to be independent thinkers responsible for making good decisions based on limited information. On-the-job training is something that cannot be skipped when you want to tackle lack of skills.

Another approach is to conduct a training needs assessment and ask the staff members themselves what skills they would like to develop. These minimum training requirements, while helpful, do not address the full spectrum of skills and competencies a supervisor needs to be effective. Also run it a few times on the computer you will be using in class to make sure it works smoothly on that machine.
