More than 40 farm animals have also been killed. Anti-personnel landmines -- which are specifically designed to explode upon contact with a person -- have killed or maimed an estimated 100 million people worldwide, with at least 63,000 victims in Cambodia alone. A recent survey showed that 13 out of 16 victims of landmine injury over a 3 week time span were civilians rather than combatants, involved in activities including wood cutting and herding animals.
