The global civil society: [Essay Example], 747 words GradesFixer

Voters and shareholders have more control and sanction over what governments and businesses do than the constituency of an NGO will ever have over its activities. NGOs, and any other citizen groups engaged in public policy deliberations, must be very clear about two things: 1. In some countries, these gaps have been left by sheer government negligence and obliged societies to adopt a self-help mentality of managing the crisis for themselves.
