Poverty in Ireland Five shillings a week The level of benefit - not more than 5 shillings a week for a single person and 7 shillings for a married couple - had been set low for two reasons. They are also available on microfilm, courtesy of FamilySearch, in PRONI's self-service microfilm room, and their contents were published in two books by Josephine Masterson see box in right hand column. Application of Part V of the Act 8.

Irish Statute Book

Under family law legislation, responsibility for compliance with the legislation, in so far as it affects the administration of public service pension schemes, falls on the trustees of the schemes. The Journal of the Royal Statistical Society published in December 1910 suggested that the percentage of take up among those eligible for the Old Age Pension 'could probably be accepted as approximately indicative of the relative poverty of the population'.
