How Aging Populations are Impacting the Higher Education Sector

Arch Wong, Professor of Practical Theology and Director of E-Learning at Ambrose Seminary For many faculty, and even some of those who took part in early Wabash courses the course was redesigned recently to offer a more hands-on experience , teaching online still seems daunting. Here, aging is a process and not an outcome, and the goals compensation are specific to the individual. We know that there have always been thoroughly secular people, who defined themselves explicitly by what they saw and touched, and who lived their lives in disregard of the divine.

(Not) Being There: Online Distance Education in Theological Schools

The United Nations and other international organizations have developed recommendations that are intended to mitigate the adverse consequences of population aging. The seminary is now committed to launching four fully online options for fall 2017.

6 Social Institutions and Policies

Yet the evidence shows this is not true.

Issues Affecting the Health of Older Citizens: Meeting the Challenge

But now we have so seen it, and that makes all the difference. The presenters reviewed the current state of knowledge in their respective fields, identifying areas of consensus and controversy and delineating the priority questions for further research and policy development. The era of glowing praise or dour resistance has given way to a creative new moment when widening interest in the role of religion and spirituality in everyday life matches the expansive access and creative pedagogies increasingly available through online courses and degrees.
