The correspondence, 1899

This approach to faith as the irrational goes counter, however, to the millennium and a half old Tradition that preceded Luther Tradition that continued after him, as well ; a Tradition in which reason and faith are seen as two different and complementary forms of human understanding, i. Our classical friends can come to our aid here, as well. Because their relationship was one of friendship — which might seem surprising, at first, based on the retrospective image that we have of the two; as said, one being the epitomic Catholic convert prominent socially, artistically, even politically, in early twentieth century France , the other retrospectively a flag-bearer of unbelief, and even of an inimical relationship to the faith - or at least to the Church.

And what a soothing and liberating encounter that was — in comparison! So I did not find exactly what I went looking for, in this volume of correspondence, but what I did find, and what I did learn, from reading it, did in fact clarify some aspects of what I went looking for and I will explain what I mean by this in a moment. Available in PDF, EPUB, Mobi Format. Let me try to explain this a bit further.

The limiting and centering of our pursuit of the truth in the I carries with it an inherent pridefulness even if the pursuer does not intend it that way and stubbornness. In the beginning it Was Claudel who was eager for friendship, and he wrote more letters to Gide than Gide wrote to him.
